Poore Baſſianus here lies murthered.
Tamora. Then all too late I bring this fatall writ,
The complot of this timeleſſe Tragedie,
And wonder greatly that mans face can fold,
In pleaſing ſmiles ſuch murderous tyrranie.
She giueth Saturnine a letter.

Saturninus reads the letter.

And if wee miſſe to meete him handſomelie,
Sweet huntſman, Baſſianus tis we meane,
Doe thou ſo much as dig the graue for him,
Thou knowſt our meaning looke for thy reward,
Among the Nettles at the Elder tree,
Which ouer ſhades the mouth of that ſame pit,
Where we decreed to burie Baſſianus,
Doe this and purchaſe vs thy laſting friends.

King. Oh Tamora was euer heard the like,
This is the pit, and this the Elder tree,
Looke Sirs if you can finde the huntſman out,
That ſhould haue murthered Baſſianus here.
Aron. My gratious Lord here is the bag of gold.
King. Two of thy whelps, fell curs of bloody kinde,
Haue here bereft my brother of his life:
Sirs drag them from the pit vnto the priſon,
There let them bide vntill we haue deuiſd,
Some neuer hard of tortering paine for them.
Tam. VVhat are they in this pit, Oh wondrous thing!
How eaſily murder is diſcouered.
Titus. High Emperour, vpon my feeble knee,
I beg this boone, with teares not lightly ſhed,
That this fell fault of my accurſed ſonnes,
Accurſed, if the faults be proud in them.
King. If it be proude, you ſee it is apparant, who

Who found this letter, T
Tamora. Andronicus
Titus. I did my Lord, y
For by my Fathers reuere
They ſhall be ready at yo
To anſwere their ſuſpitio
King. Thou ſhalt not
Some bring the murthere
Let them not ſpeake a wo
For by my ſoule, were the
That end vpon them ſho
Tamora. Andronicus
Feare not thy ſonnes, the Titus. Come Lucius co

Enter the Empreſſe ſo cut off, and her

Deme. So now go tel
VVho twas that cut thy t
Chi. VVrite downe th
And if thy ſtumpes will
Deme. See how with ſi
Chi. Goe home, call
Demet. She hath no to
And ſo lets leaue her to h
Chi. And twere my cauſe
Demet. If thou hadſt ha

Enter Marc

VVho is this, my Neece t
Coſen a word, where is yo
If I doe dreame would all